Making connections is thinking about the text in relation to ourselves, other texts, and the world (Keene & Zimmerman, 2000). The ability to make connections provides the basis for learning, as students connect new information with their own experiences. This, therefore, is necessary for understanding. The Super Six framework focuses on working with making connections, monitoring, visualising, inferring/predicting, questioning and summarising. This collection has not only posters and visual displays to use in your classroom, but also a large range of texts with associated questions that encompass the Super Six Comprehension strategies. Making Connections and the Super Six. Welcome to this post, I hope to share with you how I have and still use the Super Six in my classroom. I have been using the Super Six since 2012, and I simply cannot teach without using these strategies – simply because they work! The “Super Six” comprehension strategies: 1. Making Connections. Students are encouraged to make personal connections from the text with: something in their own life, another text or something occurring in the world. Students focus on making connections in various activities via the Library and the Comprehension Gym. This occurs as students ...
